

ORGANISATION

How to help your child

Mrs Hammersley

Most children generate a little chaos and disorganization. Yours might flit from one thing to the next — forgetting books at school, leaving towels on the floor, and failing to finish projects once started.

You'd like them to be more organized and to stay focused on tasks, such as homework. Is it possible?

Yes! A few children seem naturally organized, but for the rest, organization is a skill learned over time. With help and some practice, children can develop an effective approach to getting stuff done.

And you're the perfect person to teach your child, even if you don't feel all that organized yourself!

Make the timetable colour coded

Make a few copies, one for the blazer pocket, one for the wall/fridge food and one for the journal

Make a plan of what homework your child is going to do and on which night.

Get your child to note down correctly in their planner the homework that has been set, or/and check 'Showmyhomework'.

Can you assess this site????

Get push notifications straight to your pocket about reminders for upcoming homework and new tasks set.

Get your child into a routine.....

The most effective is as soon as they are home from school, do the homework set that day.

Make sure they have a quiet place to work and where they can be supervised.

Set a time limit.

Get them to check their timetable so they can pack for the following day.

Making sure they get into the routine of checking they have all their equipment, pencil cases etc and also getting their P.E kit ready, ingredients for Food Tech and any homework due in, all placed into their bag ready for the next day.

Leave the bag somewhere easy to spot in the morning .eg by the door so they can just pick it up and go in the morning.

Once your child get into a routine — they can start tackling tasks more independently. That means homework and other tasks will get done with increasing consistency and efficiency. Of course, Children will still need parental help and guidance, but you probably won't have to nag as much.

Not only is it practical to teach these skills, but knowing how to get tasks completed will help your child feel more competent and effective. Children feel self-confident and proud when they're able to accomplish their tasks and responsibilities. This means they should end up with extra free time to do what they'd like to do.
